can't help someone who doesn't want to help themselves. I was really impressed by that."

Holmes said it was a bit of a culture shock to come to Eastern Kentucky, but that she had enjoyed it "very much" and it was very motivational for her to continue trying to help others.

"They were very grateful, but it wasn't charity," Holmes said. "We just wanted to help them be able to get their child home. They had to have ramps, a special tub and there were other things that had to be done to accommodate the baby. They should be able to go home next week. We are going to come back, but we are working on a wedding in Ohio and we will be going to Nevada this week. We will come back to see the finished product. I'm just so thankful for all the volunteers and the help the family received. It was amazing. There are a lot of good people in that community and they may not have a lot of money, but they do have big hearts. I hope we will have the opportunity to help someone else in that community."

Holmes' mother, Kim Shidel, is a member of the board of directors of the organization and is also a co-founder.

"It really is important that the people we are helping trust us to help them and to not show up there to make them look bad. I know that they talked about something someone else did previously and that is not what we want to do," Shidel said. "We are not trying to make anyone look bad. My daughter had to undergo 45 surgeries and I've been through it so I understand what it's like and I know how much they need the help. I can relate to their situation and we just want to help them. It is a wonderful community."

She said she explained to them that if it wasn't for Paintsville Mayor Bob Porter, "they would have had to wait for the ramp."

"They were able to get it because he made a phone call and they like him," she said. "We weren't there to turn the community upside down and not there to pick people apart, I've had a sick daughter and I know what it's like. I understand. Everyone in the Music family are such good people. They were just wonderful."

Holmes said that she would like to come back to the area and help others but that she can't be everywhere and needs volunteers who could help in one way or another, including fundraising.

"If there are people who want to donate, they can and they can earmark the money for their area," Holmes said. "If the money is earmarked, it will be used there."

Holmes explained that people can help in more ways than just fundraising or contributing financially and if they are interested, they can contact her at (412) 377-3898 for more information or visit the website at jamiesdreamteam.org and like the organization on Facebook.

"Jamie maintains the Facebook page, so if anyone wants to send a message to her on there, they will reach her directly," Shidel said. "The board attempted to take the responsibility of maintaining the site off her shoulders, but she wouldn't do it and continues to maintain it personally, so if they go on there, they are speaking directly to her."

Holmes said the Music family is "still going to need a lot of help after they are able to bring Waylon home."

"The community really came together and I hope they will get all the help they need," Holmes said.

CLINIC: Owner, employee plead guilty in drug case

Dr. Clara Rodriguez-Iznaga, who eventually helped him establish Florida Global Pain Clinic in Plantation in July 2008. She also became the in-house physician, the plea agreement says.

"Dr. Rodriguez started complaining to the Defendant that she needed more patients, presuming that the Defendant would bring in more patients," the plea agreement says. "The Defendant began efforts to increase the patient load by several means including patient lists from an MRI business and contacting them to come to Florida Global Medical using a dial up service to contact patients on the list."

Robinson also used the services of two people in Ohio and the Eastern District of Kentucky to recruit individuals in those areas to go to the Florida clinic.

The initial office visit fee to the clinic was $150 to $160 in cash, and the cost of filling a prescription at the in-house pharmacy was approximately $300, the agreement says.

"Dr. Rodriguez did not want any patients using insurance and also wanted all patients to obtain a Florida I.D.," the agreement says. "The Defendant estimated Dr. Rodriguez initially saw 30-35 patients per day at the clinic."

The business arrangement was a 50-50 split of revenue from the office visit, with all office expenses coming out of Robinson's half of the money, the agreement says.

Robinson later opened a clinic in Portsmouth, Ohio, due to the number of patients who came from Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia to the Florida facility.

"The driving factor for the Defendant's and Dr. Rodriguez's involvement in the pill clinics was the need to make money in a short period," the agreement says. "Dr. Rodriguez made over $500,000 from July 2008

CASE: Conviction upheld by state Court of Appeals

rejected Fairchild's arguments that the trial court erred when it failed to grant his motion during trial for a directed verdict of acquittal on the charge of unlawful transaction with a minor, when it denied his pre-trial motion for a competency hearing and when it refused to suppress statements Fairchild gave to police.

On another issue, the appeals court said that Fairchild was denied his right to confrontation when the trial court utilized a video system for witness testimony that did not provide for actual face-to-face confrontation between Fairchild and his accusers. But the court said it was harmless error, noting a 2010 Kentucky Supreme Court decision involving another Johnson Circuit Court case. In that case, the Supreme Court ruled that the physical layout of the Johnson Circuit Courtroom violated William Star's right to confront his accusers, but that it was harmless error because Star failed to show that his "unobstructed observation would have affected the substance and credibility of the . . . witnesses."

Star was found guilty but mentally ill of murdering two Martin County residents and is serving a 30-year sentence.

In Fairchild's case, the appeals court said violation of the confrontation clause was also harmless.

"Where it does not appear that the error had a substantial probability of changing the result, it is harmless," the Court of Appeals said. "Although it was an error to allow the testimony with the layout of the court room as it is, there was no error in this case."

Fairchild is serving his sentence at the Luther Luckett Correctional Complex at LaGrange.

Lawrence man pleads guilty to manslaughter

by Lilly Adkins
ASSOCIATE EDITOR

ASHLAND — A Lawrence County man charged with killing an Olive Hill man in 2009 entered a guilty plea last week to amended charges for which his plea agreement says he will serve 20 years in prison.

Robert Limings, 49, of Blaine, pleaded guilty to first-degree manslaughter and second-degree burglary and will serve 10 years on each charge, consecutively, according to the plea deal.

Limings must serve at least 85 percent of his sentence before he will be eligible for parole.

Limings was indicted in Carter County and charged with capital murder and first-degree arson, for which he could have potentially faced the death penalty had he not accepted the plea agreement.

According to a press release issued by the Kentucky State Police at Post 14 in Ashland shortly after the incident occurred, authorities responded to a complaint of a possible arson at a residence in Olive Hill.

Upon his arrival, arson Investigator Rodney Carroll discovered a body inside the residence, and additional units responded to the scene at the time to assist with the investigation.

During the course of the investigation, Limings was arrested and charged with second-degree burglary and tampering with physical evidence and lodged in the Carter County Detention Center.

Limings, then 47, was already in custody when the indictment was issued and was then charged with capital murder and first-degree arson.

The additional charges stemmed from testimony provided to the Carter County Grand Jury by Carroll and Ben Tanner, a KSP press release said.

The grand jury indicted Limings for the December 13, 2009 offenses after Limings burglarized the home of Rick Hopkins on Garvin Ridge in Carter County.

Limings killed Hopkins inside the residence and then set fire to the home, police said.

Hopkins' body was sent to the state medical examiner's office for an autopsy.

Formal sentencing is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. on Dec. 17 in Carter County.

HAROLD — Two Pike County residents were arrested in connection with an Oct. 28 burglary at a residence in the Harold community of Floyd County.

Kayla Adkins, 26, and Matthew Adkins, 28, are both charged with first-degree burglary, theft by unlawful taking over $10,000 and theft by unlawful taking of a firearm.

According to a press release by the Kentucky State Police on Monday, KSP Trooper Jonathan Dixon responded to the complaint and spoke with the homeowner, who stated that she had been missing items from within her residence between September through October.

Dixon and KSP Det. Jimmy Anderson began investigating the crime and on Nov. 28 conducted a search of a residence in the Millard community of Pike County, where they recovered items linked to the burglary of the residence in Floyd County, the release said.

Authorities didn't release information regarding what items were taken.

Upon the conclusion of the investigation, Kayla and Matthew Adkins were charged and arrested. Both were lodged in the Floyd County Detention Center.

The incident remains under investigation by Anderson.

Preston said he doesn't know what led to the altercation.

"I didn't even know that guy, so I don't know what his problem was, but he was impaired.

They left and went out toward the Baptist Church, and I called the police and I believe they went out and arrested him at the church parking lot. He was just sitting there."

Preston said he believed officer Steve Wilburn had identified the man as Billy Collins.

Louisa Police Chief Greg Fugitt and Wilburn weren't available at press time to give additional details.

Travel stress-free with gadgets

by Kim Komando

Kim Komando hosts the nation's largest talk radio show about consumer electronics, computers and the Internet.

Many families are now setting their sights on Christmas and year-end vacations. Once they do hit the road or line up at airports, bags will be stuffed with smartphones and tablets and - most likely - a rat's nest of chargers and cables.

As much as we love visiting family and friends, traveling during the holidays can be maddening. You can smooth out some of the bumps by keeping your tech gear safe, powered up and organized.

Safety first

Before you leave, make sure your gadgets are passcode-protected and loaded with apps that will help you track and find them in case they get lost or stolen.

For iPads and iPhones, there's the free Find My iPhone. Android users can try Lookout Mobile Security.

The nice thing about these apps is they allow you to remotely wipe the gadgets in a worst-case scenario. You don't want to risk sensitive information falling into the wrong hands, which could expose you to identity theft.

Set your gadgets to automatically back up to the cloud. You might receive some important documents or email that you wouldn't want to lose. You'll also be taking lots of family photos and videos. Gadgets can be replaced; memories can't.

You'll probably be leaving gadgets and valuables behind when you travel. It's a comfort to be able to monitor your home while you're away. An inexpensive indoor security camera will keep an eye on things. You can watch your home remotely via iOS- and Android-compatible apps.

Take charge

We ask a lot of our gadgets. They're cameras. They're portable GPS units. They entertain us with games and movies. Some people even use them to communicate! All of that drains batteries fast.

If you're reading a book and need to keep a little juice in a gadget until you can get to an outlet, tweaking a few settings will help conserve power.

Turn off Bluetooth if you're not using a headset or wireless keyboard. If you're nowhere near a Wi-Fi connection or don't need one at the moment, toggle that off, too.

Lower screen brightness or use the gadget's auto-brightness feature. Turn off or limit notifications and location services to only essential apps.

Power Saver Mode for Android will manage these power-sapping features for you. Going into airplane mode on an iOS gadget instantly shuts off the cellular connection, Wi-Fi, Bluetooth and location services.

Here's a bonus tip: If you're traveling out of the country, airplane mode is a great way to keep your gadgets from connecting to cellular services at international roaming rates. Your phone bill will thank you! Learn some other ways to avoid data overages while traveling.

Portable recharging/backup battery gadgets and battery cases for phones and tablets will give your gadgets a few extra hours of useable life. You might have e-readers and other gadgets that need to charge through mini USB cables. Bring an adapter that turns a wall outlet into a multiport USB charging station. I sell many handy recharging solutions for travelers in my store.

If your vacation involves a hotel stay, throw a mini powerstrip/surge protector into your luggage. Hotel rooms never seem to have

Summer work leads to career for BSACAP WIA participant

PAINTSVILLE — Roger "Levi" Lee likes his job. "It's a really good job," said Lee, a Johnson County deputy PVA.

Lee, who has worked at the PVA's office full-time since February 2011, initially worked there part-time during the summer of 2010 as part of WorkNow Kentucky, which was overseen by Workforce Investment Act (WIA) staff.

The WIA program is administered by Big Sandy Area Community Action Program and provides employment and training services. In addition, the WIA Youth Program offers assistance with academic or job-related learning and helps youth prepare for further education and eventual employment.

"Mom was out one day and she came home and said, 'Here's a program you should try,'" recalls Lee, 24, of Nippa. "I was at the house playing video games all day. Although I was making money off tournaments, she didn't think that (career choice) would be a good idea."

Lee took his mother's advice and enrolled in the program where he met WIA Youth Services Coordinator Erica Ash. Ash helped Lee develop a career action plan and hone his employment skills.

"They gave me tips on interview skills and told me how to dress. I had been wearing band shirts to interviews. They told me to keep my hair trimmed, too." Lee tugs at his hair and adds, "I need to get a haircut."

Ash says Lee also completed 30 hours of work readiness training, which included a career assessment. After graduating from Johnson Central High School, Lee earned certificates in website creation and computer programming. Due to these interests, Ash placed him with a company that creates websites. Next, he filed and took photos of maps and properties at the PVA office before moving on to a printing company.

"I did manual labor there," Lee says with a smile. "I didn't want to do that. I have the arms of a girl."

According to Ash, placing clients with more than one employer is a normal part of the process.

"Sometimes, it's about learning what you don't want to do," she notes.

Lee had discovered what he wanted to do the summer he worked at the PVA's office. When he heard Johnson County PVA Michael "Dip" Stafford had plans to hire another deputy PVA, Lee approached him about the job.

Lee's work ethic had impressed Stafford, so he hired him.

"Levi displayed a willingness to learn and an enthusiasm to do tasks asked of him," Stafford notes. "He's punctual and a hard worker and he exhibits good people skills."

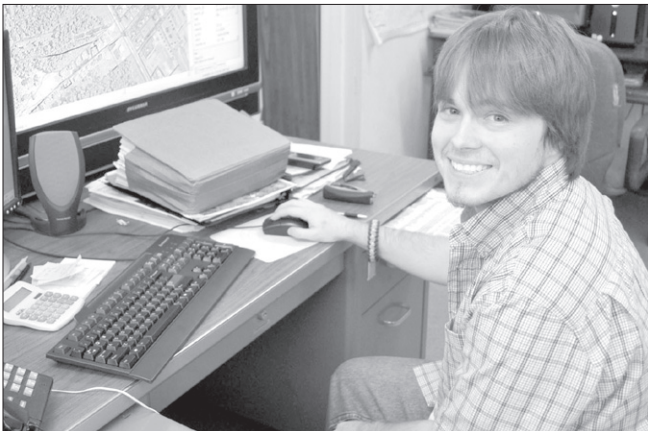

Deputy PVA Judy Collins agrees.

"We liked him so well, we wanted to keep him," Collins says. "He was nice and quiet and we thought he could learn mapping. And he has."

"I work with surveyors and put surveys into the computer so everything gets mapped," Lee says. "Mapping is my favorite thing about the job."

Ash believes Lee's outlook helped him get this job he likes so well.

"It's great to have someone

JOHNSON COUNTY DEPUTY PVA Roger "Levi" Lee sits at his desk in the PVA's office. A summer work program overseen by Big Sandy Area Community Action Program's Workforce Investment Act led to Lee getting the full-time job with the PVA.

THANKSGIVING DINNER

THE PAINTSVILLE CHURCH of Christ extended a helping hand on Thanksgiving Day by serving Thanksgiving dinners to any member of the community who wanted one. The mission was to serve any person or family in need of a dinner or in need of company with whom to enjoy it. Volunteers served dinners at the building from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m., feeding approximately 150 people. Next year, the effort will be continued on Thanksgiving Day; hopefully, even more people will be fed. Pictured left to right are volunteers Janie Lemaster, Aprill Orsborne, Glenda Meade and Jessica Bostic.

TRAVEL: (Continued from A7)

enough outlets, because most outlets are blocked by desks and drawers!

Organize

There's nothing worse than arriving at a destination and then spending hours untangling all your gadget power cables! Fortunately, there is an easy solution.

Head down to your nearest office supply store and grab some twist ties for a few bucks. Then just roll up your cables and tie them to keep them in order during travel.

Twist ties also work great to organize the cables for your computer or entertainment center at home!

Happy trails.
